

I think both Republicans and Democrats are equally hypocritical, locked in an endless battle trying to outdo each other in illogical behavior, failures, mediocrity, and corruption.

user1

I would say that Republicans are more hypocritical. Look at the whole shooting thing. We protect the fetus, but kids get killed and we turn a blind eye.

user2

If I had to pick, I would agree on Republicans, however.

user1

I see your point and I'm not saying that Democrats aren't hypocritical at times as well.

user2

I also agree, their logic regarding abortions is ridiculous, as well as a multitude of other topics.

user1

If they cared so much about life, they would adopt unwanted children instead of let them suffer and die. They would also not throw people such as illegal immigrants into sub-human conditions.

user1

All life is precious, meaning only their own.

user1

True, and with guns as well. We want safe schools and no shootings, but people should have all the guns they want.

user2

A bad guy will be stopped by a good guy, but they had a good guy at that school and it didn't help.

user2

Agree, their stance on gun control is incredibly hypocritical and often does not even match their own opinions in cases where they are appealing only to their base or to their lobby that got them elected.

user1

Well that's the thing. It's not about the kids or the guns, it's about who gives them money.

user2

It's not even about the base because 80% in a new poll say they want background checks, etc. And that has to include at least some of their base.

user2

People vastly underestimate how hard it is to respond to an unexpected scenario like a sudden shooting. I served in a foreign army as I am a dual citizen, and I assure you that even soldiers who are at the top of their game freeze up. But hey, everyone is a born hero.

user1

That is why their idea to arm teachers is a bad idea.

user2

I would probably freeze in a situation like that.

user2

It's also ridiculous because in a shootout, it's difficult to know who is friend or foe. First responders will be confused who is the culprit and more than likely people will end up shooting each other.

user1

I just heard on the news that the resource officer didn't shoot when he saw the guy coming in with a gun.

user2

Republicans are also hypocritical in that they claim their actions are guided by the US Constitution, yet ignore it when convenient.

user1

Probably because he knew he'd be killed.

user2

Well it's like their interpretation of the bible.

user2

They leave out the parts that are inconvenient.

user2

Yeah dying for minimum wage is not a good option for most people.

user1

True

user2

Which is another issue, why pay people what they are worth when we can just claim America is the greatest.

user1

They are always quoting the bible, but leave out the parts about how people should be generous to their fellow man.

user2

100% agree

user1

Yes, that as well. People can't afford stuff, the economy is bad. Raise minimum wage? No way. Our donors won't like that.

user2

They complain about stuff that could be easily fixed (or at least taking a step towards fixing).

user2

I guess complaining is good red meat for the base.

user2

Distracting people is the oldest trick in the book to curry favor and maintain power

user1

Well it's been good talking to you...

user2

